The Green Thumber

By LEWIS LORING

When I was studying landscape design in college some twenty years ago, we had an instructor who often said that when in doubt and you didn't know what to include in a design to use myrtle. It was a very versatile plant and could be used in many ways and seldom would you go wrong.

The myrtle plants are not used very often now, but there is one class of plants that you should know because they are foolproof and will accept a wide variation in soil, exposure, are disease and pest free, available in any growth height that may be desired, and are green the year around with attractive flowers as well. These are the Carissas or natal plum.

By proper selection of variety you may obtain a type that grows to a height of six to eight feet, or one in the three to five foot bracket. If you wish a ground cover type, there are prostrate forms thereof.

The plant makes an excellent informal hedge, and has "just enough thorns on it to act as a barrier. The white star shaped flowers are very attractive against the deep dark green foliage, and later these flowers are followed by a reddish plum shaped fruit which is edible.

The plant is very attractive against redwood and even makes an excellent plant for redwood tub in either sun or shade. The rate of growth is moderate and never does it have that "off season" look. In winters of heavy frosts it may get nipped back slightly, but will recover itself when these frosty days are over.

Check into the Carissas. They will be an asset to any garden, and certainly are most effective when planted in mass effects.

ROY KATO AT POLYTECHNIC

Roy Kato, 18357 Crenshaw blvd., Torrance, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Kato, is one of more than 500 new and returning students registering for the fall quarter at the Kellogg-Voorhis campus of the California State Polytechnic college, Pomona.

Kato is a Sophomore student majoring in ornamental horticulture at the local state college.

The yearly get-together for coffee and donuts will be held at 4846 Mindora dr. on Thursday, October 4, between 9:30 and 11:30. Everyone in the community is cordially invited.

P-T-A Planning To Further Membership

The Torrance High School Parent-Teacher Association is holding its annual membership drive through October 12.

Mrs. Paul Brunner, membership chairman, is hopeful that all the parents and teachers and many friends will join the organization this year, thereby expressing their interest in the students, and their willingness to put forth some effort in their behalf.

She stresses the fact that the teenager in high school has the same need for his parents' cooperation with the school and the teachers as he did when in the lower grades.

Some of the activities that the Torrance high school PTA participate in are: operation of the football concession and it turns over 50% of the profits to the student body. They also sponsor the after-graduation party.

PTA makes arrangements for needy students to have dental care, lunches, and clothing when temporarily unable to provide them for themselves. Substantial loans are made to graduates interested in the teaching or nursing fields.

They also help towards the support of the American Field Service.

NARBONNE PTA MEMBERS RATIFIED

Board members of Narbonne high school P-T-A met with their new President, Mrs. D. G. Cheek, at Torrance park.

The business meeting was called to order, during which time new board members were ratified.

Following the meeting a pot-luck luncheon was served.
